Interest Approach. Use an interest approach that will prepare students for the lesson. A possible approach is included here.

Have students list two or three things that they want to achieve in their lives. Explain that the items they list are goals. Common goals students identify might include getting an education, having a family, getting a good job, or buying a nice car. Ask students to list what they need to do to accomplish these goals. Let this lead to a discussion around the fact that accomplishing a goal is a series or process. It involves value being placed on future achievements.

Objectives and Teaching Strategies

Objective 1: Explain the process of goal setting.

Anticipated Problem: How are goals set?

I. A goal is something a person wants to achieve. When people describe what they want to accomplish in life, they are setting or developing goals.

   A. Developing goals involves two important steps.
      1. Goal identification—developing a list of the things to accomplish in life. Individuals need to look inward at their values and their personal situations to determine what is realistic for them. They need to determine what is important and realistic.
      2. Ways and means—the strategies for achieving goals. A goal is of little value if it doesn't have a strategy for being achieved. During this step, individuals often determine that their final goals may be unrealistic and revise the goals to make them more realistic.

Provide students with resource materials. Have them read the "Goal Setting" section in Chapter 7 of Developing Leadership and Communication Skills or Chapter 5 in AgriMarketing Technology. Use TM: B3–1A to illustrate the important steps in developing goals. Have students complete LS: B3–1A Guide for Goal Setting. Use supervised study followed by class discussion to reinforce lesson content. Summarize the content on the classroom writing surface.

Objective 2: Describe the terms and types of goals.

Anticipated Problem: What are the different terms and types of goals?

II. Goals can cover varying periods of time. Some can be attained fairly soon while others will take longer to achieve. They can also be divided into different areas of life in which they are important.

   A. Goal term or length goals can be differentiated by the amount of time and number of steps it takes to achieve them.
      1. A short-term goal can be achieved within a year in just a few steps.
      2. An intermediate goal can be achieved in one to five years. Intermediate goals can involve achieving short-term goals along the way.
      3. A long-term goal will take five or more years to achieve and usually involves many steps. Long-term goals usually include short-term and intermediate goals along the way.

   B. Goals can apply to different areas of life. They are based on what individuals judge as important in these areas of their lives.
      1. Personal goals are those that represent self improvement. Personal goals can relate to things like learning or physical fitness.
2. Professional goals are those that represent success in a job or group activity. Examples of professional goals include becoming a manager or being elected the chair of a committee.

3. Interpersonal goals are those that represent improved relations with other people. Such goals might include getting along better with family or friends.

Provide students with resource materials. Have them read the “Goals: Get Ready” section in Chapter 7 of Developing Leadership and Communication Skills. Display TM: B3–1B to illustrate that goals involve various lengths of time. Display TM: B3–1C to illustrate the different areas of life in which goals apply. Use supervised study followed by class discussion to reinforce content. Summarize the content on the classroom writing surface.

Objective 3: Explain seven aspects of effective goals.

Anticipated Problem: What are the aspects of good goals?

III. When setting goals, individuals need to consider seven aspects that relate to effective goals.

A. Clarity — the goals being set should be clear and easy to picture. If a person cannot imagine achieving the goal, it lacks clarity.

B. Optimistic — the belief that the goal will have a desired outcome. The outcome should be one that is important and represents an improvement over the current situation.

C. Challenging — a goal should require the individual to strive to achieve it. The challenge of a goal needs to be high but obtainable. When challenging goals are achieved, a sense of accomplishment is realized.

D. Prioritized — placing values on which goal is most important, second most important, and so on. Prioritizing allows individuals to consider the relevant importance of activities.

E. Flexible — as people and conditions change, so must goals. Having flexible goals allows people to cope with the changes that are constantly occurring around them.

F. Measurable — there should be no doubt as to whether or not the goal has been met. The goal should be specific in what it is going to achieve.

G. Ways and means — plans for achieving goals. Deadline dates may be included to insure that progress is being made.

Provide students with resource materials. Have them read the “Goal Setting” section in Chapter 7 of Developing Leadership and Communication Skills. Display TM: B3–1D to illustrate the seven qualities of effective goals. Review LS: B3–1A (completed earlier), to determine if the goals identified meet the criteria of effective goals. Use supervised study followed by class discussion to reinforce content. Summarize the content on the classroom writing surface.

Review/Summary. Use the student learning objectives to summarize the lesson. Have students explain the content associated with each objective. Student responses can be used in determining which objectives need to be reviewed or retaught using a different approach. Questions at the end of each chapter in the recommended textbooks may also be used in the review/summary.

Application. Application may involve one or more of the following student activities:

LS: B3–1A — Guide for Goal Setting

Have students complete the appropriate activities in the “Exploring” section at the end of Chapter 7 in Developing Leadership and Communication Skills.

Evaluation. Evaluation should focus on student achievement of the objectives for the lesson. Various techniques can be used, such as student performance on the application activities. A sample written test is attached. Also, have students complete the Chapter 7 self-check in Developing Leadership and Communication Skills.
